DISTRICT COURT MAY TERM OPENS IN BRAINERD MAY 7

LET CONSTABLES GET BUSY

The May term of the district court opens in Brainerd on Tuesday, May 7, and Judge B. F. Wright of Park Rapids will preside.

The grand jury will be assembled at 10 o'clock in the morning and will be charged by the judge.

Wednesday will be devoted to hearing citizenship applications.

On Thursday at 9 in the morning the petit jury will be called. The calendar includes 14 civil cases, eight appeal cases, six real estate tax cases, one personal property tax case.

The first case on the call is that of Koehliching county vs John Nuyes & Co., Chicago bankers. N. B. Arnold of Duluth is special attorney for Koehliching county, the case coming to Crow Wing county on a change of venue.

Another important case is that of J. C. Higbe vs Palmer.

The last term had 25 cases charging illegal liquor selling, the authorities enforcing the law vigorously. This term it is thought will be no exception to the November term.

Judge Wright will be in Brainerd this week, on Wednesday, May 1, hearing in chambers a case from Aitkin county.

COL. THORP PAINTS GREAT DETROIT MAN

His Portrait of Christian H. Buhl, Detroit Civil War Mayor, Receives Much Commendation

Mr. Buhl Was Founder of Detroit, Mich., Great Industries—Man of Great Force of Character

Col. Freeman Thorp, internationally known as one of the best portrait painters and especially skilled in painting posthumous portraits based on photographs and other data, has gained further renown in Detroit, Mich.

The Detroit Times in a column and a half story embellished by a picture of his painting of Civil War Mayor C. H. Buhl, states:

"The hanging of Thorp's new portrait of Christian H. Buhl, Detroit's Civil war mayor, in the gallery of mayors in the city hall, is the initial step in transforming the inadequate series of crayon portraits into oils. For this innovation, Arthur H. Buhl, heir, not only of his grandfather's name, but also of many of his characteristics, is responsible, and Col. Freeman Thorp, the famous Washington portrait painter, now in Detroit at work on the notable series, will presently have another of the city's former executives adequately memorialized on canvas in the mayor's office.

"Col. Thorp, whom Arthur H. Buhl thus introduced to Detroiters, was 44 years ago given a studio upon the roof of the capitol in Washington, where for 20 years he painted the distinguished Americans whose portraits adorn the corridors and halls of the national capital, among them four presidents, including Lincoln who sat for Col. Thorp just before his inauguration.

"The grandfather of Arthur H. Buhl, president of Buhl Sons company and the directing genius of the other Buhl industries, was mayor of the city in Civil war days. But he was more. He was one of the very founders of Detroit's industries, first as a great fur trader, then as a wholesale hardware merchant, and finally as the developer of infant industries which have grown now to enormous portions at the hands of his descendants. Of the characteristics of Christian H. Buhl, mayor of Detroit, let Col. Thorp, his painter, speak:

"Among all the faces in this gallery of Detroit mayors, that of Christian Buhl stands out unmistakably as the forceful man, the man of mental breath and of strong will, the doer, the man who was an executive in the mayor's chair and out of it. The record of his achievements as a leader in business are well attested by his strong face."

Passing on the portrait were old time associates and friends of the late mayor and they were loud in their praise of the life-like portrait which Col. Thorp had painted, a picture as good as though the sitter was still alive. The fame of Col. Thorp as a painter has spread to European capitals.

Friends of Col. Thorp relate with pleasure an incident tending to show this. A wealthy family wished a portrait painted of one of its ancestors long since passed away and they appealed to a European art connoisseur to recommend some one skilled in such a branch of art.

"Is there any one in Europe to whom we could entrust the proper execution of such a commission?"

"Why, you have right here in your

A citizen familiar with the continually added duties of sheriff, county attorney and all other county officers, on account of the war, read the complaint of the president of the Bay Lake Rural Progressive club regarding wild travel of a lawless element over the Deerwood-Bay Lake road.

In the account written by H. E. Kneiff, secretary of the club, was this paragraph:

"In discussing this state of affairs the sentiment was general that there must be some way whereby this nuisance can be abated in a lawful way by the proper officials and as a club we feel that we are law abiding citizens and the time has come when we are justified in asking for energetic action by those in authority."

Has this club ever realized that the first step in enforcing law in a township rests with the town constable? That they have a justice of the peace? One fails to read anywhere of a single constable out at Bay Lake getting busy on this complaint regarding such travel on the road.

County attorney and sheriff have acted promptly on information given them in any matter. The sheriff has covered the county as well as possible with the limited means at his disposal.

County and federal business pile up his work to 16 hours or more a day. What the Bay Lake club should do is first "jack up" its own constable and judicial machinery.

Casualty List

Washington, April 29—Two casualty lists containing one hundred and fifty names have been issued.

Split British and French Armies is the Avowed Design

Washington, April 29—It is understood that Germany will soon launch from Switzerland the propaganda that the offensive is designed to split the British and French armies and if the efforts of the armies to accomplish that fails they will offer to settle. The French loan to Russia is now apparently lost and they will attempt to create French dissatisfaction with the British "for starting the war and then not doing their part."

DEATH TRAP ON 13TH ST.

One of the most dangerous places in Brainerd streets was located at the corner of Thirteenth and South Oak streets Sunday. There are, in fact, three cuts in the cement paving made by contractors who laid sewers, all within a radius of two blocks on Thirteenth street, but the one near Oak was the worst trap.

Rains made the clay thrown into the breach a mush and cars dropped two feet into the trap. The jagged cement gave pounding blows to tires and there will certainly be a crop of damaged tires and quite a few broken springs at that point.

One little Ford drove along slowly Sunday night and dropped its front wheels into the pit with such a jump that it stuck there a quarter of an hour. All its lights were put out.

The location of these death traps is called to the attention of the councilmen of that ward, to the street committee and others and steps should be taken immediately to cement up the three holes. Even the farmers complained about the condition of the street at the points named.

RED CROSS AUCTION, DANCE, VELVET BEACH

Spacious Dining Hall of Ike Miller's Summer Hotel and Ideal Place For the Dance

Goodly Attendance Expected From Pequot and Brainerd, All Are Assured a Good Time

(Communicated)

Mission Lake Auxiliary Red Cross will give an auction sale and dance at Velvet Beach on Friday evening, May 3rd.

The spacious dining hall of the Ike Miller summer hotel is an ideal place for dancing and plans are laid for making this affair a complete success, socially as well as remunerative, for the auxiliary.

A goodly attendance is expected from both Pequot and Brainerd and all are assured a good time. Lunch will be served by the ladies.

Get out your car and come. If your own wife won't come, bring your neighbor's wife—anything to help out the Red Cross.

Dance tickets will be fifty cents—we won't mention how much you may need for the auction.

DR. HENRY VAN DYKE

Former U. S. Envoy to Netherlands, Says Holland Will Fight.

Holland will fight if her sovereignty or independence is assailed by Germany, according to the belief of Dr. Henry Van Dyke, for four years American minister to the Netherlands. "The majority of the Dutch people are not pro-German," Dr. Van Dyke declared. "They recognize that Germany for 50 years has wanted possession of the mouth of the Rhine. And that would mean German occupation or control of Rotterdam. Holland, above all, is intensely pro-Dutch. Her chief desire is to preserve her sovereignty, territorial integrity and independence. If these things are assailed, I believe Holland will fight—regardless of who the assailant may be."

GERMANY WILL SWAP
INVALID PRISONERS WITH RUSSIA FOR THE HEALTHY GERMAN ONES

(By United Press)

Washington, April 29—Germany will send Russia an ultimatum demanding that Russia release all healthy German prisoners and keep until well all invalid German prisoners, and in return Germany will release all Russian invalids and keep all healthy Russians. If Russia refuses Germany will take Petrograd.

Present Lull in Big Battle is Because of Losses

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS, (Staff Correspondent, United Press)

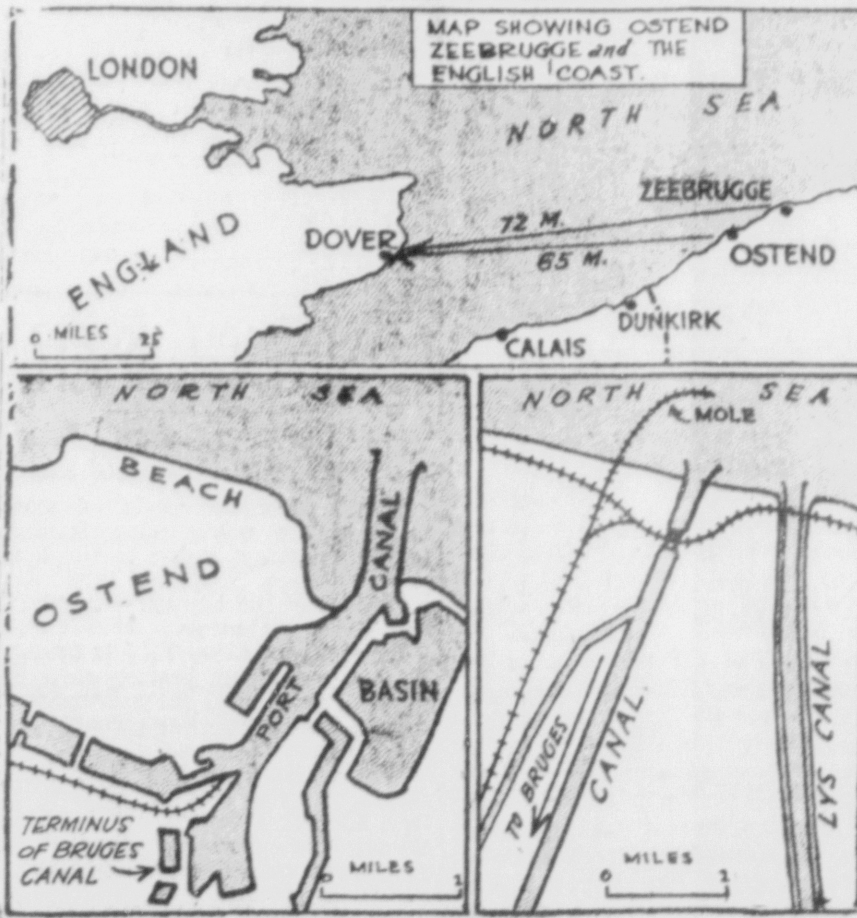

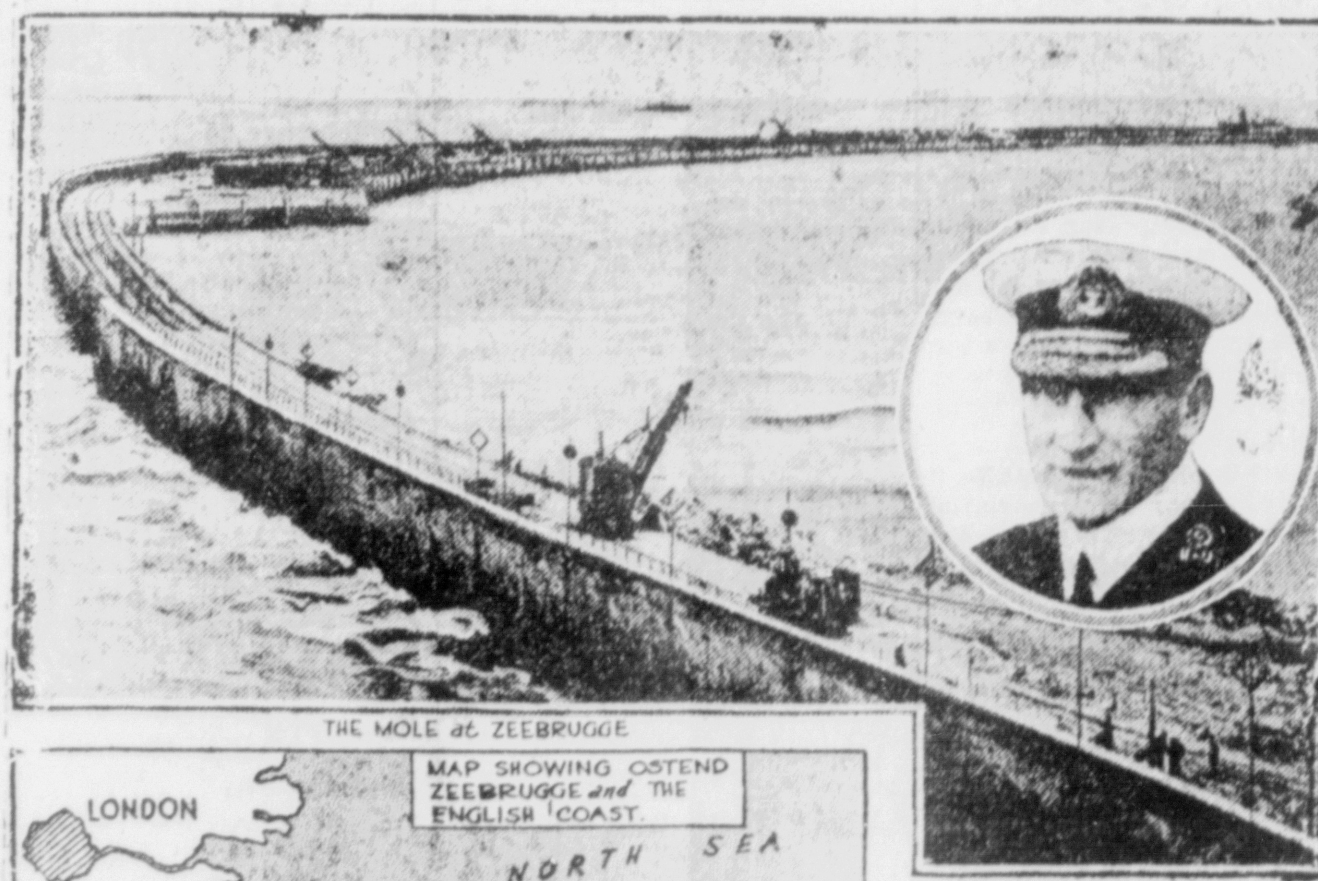

With British Afield, April 29—Practically seven ninths of the fit German divisions on the west front appeared in the fighting on the Somme or Lys. Since Hindenburg's drive started, 420,000 men have been thrown against the allies northern front, and 1,200,000 on the southern front. Twenty enemy divisions out of two hundred and forty divisions, or 2,460,000 available men have been made unfit. This accounts for the lull.

American Transports Injured in Collision

(By United Press)

Washington, April 29—The navy department announced two American transports damaged by collision at sea. Both returned safely without loss of life.

Zeebrugge Mole Blown Up by British Under Admiral Tyrwhitt

Admiral Sir Reginald Tyrwhitt led his men in cruisers to the mole and boarded it. After a fight the Germans ran and much property was destroyed by the British. Two old submarines loaded with explosives were sent against the sides to blow up the mole.

The map shows the relation of Zeebrugge and Ostend, points on the Belgian coast, which the Germans have made their submarine bases, to the coast of England and the English channel. Both points were attacked by the raiding force under Admiral Tyrwhitt. Neither town has a harbor, so small vessels and particularly submarines have entered the canals for refuge and repairs. The admiral sank three old cruisers filled with cement at the mouth of the canal leading from Zeebrugge to Bruges, so submarines will be bottled up there, and those at sea will not be able to get in. He ran two more cruisers toward the mouth of the canal at Ostend, but there was some doubt if they reached its mouth.

German Drive in Flanders Resumed After 24 Hours

(By United Press)

The German drive in Flanders was resumed after a lull of 24 hours, the official statements show that the British are holding the enemy at Voormezele, two miles south of Ypres.

The French are successfully defending Loere and the only progress made by the Germans was the voluntary retirement of British east of Ypres, this retirement being on the four mile front from Langermark to Zeedelebeke. The Germans claim capturing Hooze, a mile and a half due east of Ypres.

Knowing Where Your Money Goes

On the stubs of your check book which this bank furnishes you, or will be glad to furnish you if it is not doing so, is written your financial history. These check stubs tell the story of your receipts and expenditures.

Spending from the pocket is like scattering money to the four winds; you know not whither it has gone, or what it went for.

But if you have the stubs of your check book to consult, your position is fortified when claims for a second payment are made.

And if you would like to review your financial history of months or years past, and determine where you could curtail a little, your stubs and your canceled checks spread the story of your expenditures before you in clean-cut characters.

And if it is your desire to create a surplus from your income, you can watch where it goes, stop many a leak, and insure your progress, by writing us you go along your financial history in a check book which this bank will furnish you.

front from Meterem to Voormezele a distance of over ten miles and infantry attacks are developing under cover of a terrific bombardment of high explosives and gas shells. The southern end of the Flanders front from distant, is also under heavy artillery

Humors of War.
The humors of war are the humors of humanity. They have a body and a substance as real as are the fighting men who rest before they die. They bring relief to our spirits, because they savor of nature's "indefatigable renewals." The callous levity of the trenches never offends us when we remember that the Jokers are pledged to the great sacrifice. The determined and not too easy cheerfulness of the warring nations is a miracle of encouragement. We shall have plenty of chance to be courageous along these lines.
But the mirth of neutrals is apt to be distasteful when it mocks at the things of war. In one of the most charming and intimate of early English essays, Covetly speaks this word of wisdom:
"God laughs at a man who says to his soul, 'Take thine ease.'"—Agnes Repplier in the Yale Review.

LESS OCCASION FOR REVELRY Average Man Is Apt to Spend His For-tieth Birthday Quieter Than He Did His Twentieth.
"Congratulations!"
And Jones eagerly extended his hand to his friend.
"Forty yesterday, weren't you?"
"Yes."
"Recalls old times. I recollect your twentieth birthday and how we boys and girls of the neighborhood had a big night of it. Did you make a night of it last night and get the old crowd together?"
"Birthdays are like trips to Europe, Jim," said the man who had just passed forty. "The first time I went across all my friends came down to see me off and brought flowers, books and good things to eat. The second time
I went only my family came down.
The third time I went no one came. I drank a cocktail all alone."
"So with birthdays. At twenty all the neighborhood boys and girls sky-larked until midnight. On my thirtieth birthday the children were allowed to sit up and we had a family birthday party. This year the wife was so much interested in war work that I ate alone and spent the evening smoking my pipe, alone."

ARCHBISHOP IS FATIGUED
Secretary Says Venerable Prelate Is Not Ill.
St. Paul, April 27.—On account of reports that Archbishop Ireland had suffered a relapse and that his condition was critical, the Rev. Thomas E. Welch, his secretary, today issued the following statement:
"The archbishop has not suffered a relapse. He is merely fatigued from traveling from Florida a couple of weeks ago. He is not in any more serious condition than he has been for months. In fact, his condition is really better now than it has been since he arrived in St. Paul from Florida. He spends a part of each day in study and attends to some routine duties. He is not confined to

STOMACH UPSET?
Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr.
Edwards' Olive Tablets
That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.
If you have a bad taste in your mouth, tongue coated, appetite poor, lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, troubled with undigested foods, you should take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.
Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief, so you can eat what you like.
At 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Dollars and Cents— A Solid Argument

UNDER an individual Trustee a certain estate yielded $3000 a year to the heirs. The estate was then placed in the hands of an experienced Trust Company.

By economies in management, due largely to efficient organization and superior investing facilities, the income was soon increased to over $4,000 per year.

This $1,000 increase in income was secured at no increase in cost for Trustee service and with increased safety of invested capital.

Wells-Dickey Trust Company, unlike an individual, does not have to go outside its own organization for expert service, accountants or clerks. These facilities are at hand and available to estates without extra cost.

DEEDS OF CHIVALRY

Men and Women Specially Trained Make Sacrifice, Lecture at Church Tonight

The valiant knights of old certainly do not surpass the labors of the splendid men and women of America who are giving of their time, talent and all they have for the upbuilding of the kingdom of righteousness and justice in the world.

Today there are thousands of men and women throughout the world and many in the war stricken countries of Europe and Asia who are displaying deeds of chivalry and sacrifice that make the whole world wonder.

These men and women after receiving training in this country have gone forth and fired with the Gospel of Christ go about doing good, alleviating sorrow, ministering to the needy and are doing a most important work in making the world safe for democracy.

Tonight at 7:30 in the First Congregational church the district representative of the Schaffler training school where many of these modern knights receive training will give an address on the splendid work being done by that institution.

It will be a rare treat and the citizens of Brainerd should avail themselves of this opportunity. Everybody is invited.

SQUABBLING OVER THE SPOILS

Teutonic Allies Fear Germany Will Seize Everything.

Washington, April 29.—Germany's allies are squabbling over their share in the prospective spoils of the war, and are beginning to fear there will be no spoils except for Germany, in case the Teutonic nations are victorious in the war.

Official diplomatic dispatches to Italian Ambassador Celleri and through French and British channels disclose that Bulgaria and Turkey are fighting over expected spoils, which German papers now warn must go to neither—but must be taken by Germany.

Bulgaria demands Saloniki for herself, according to Italian cables. Turkey objects, fearing any addition to Bulgaria's strength.

Nellie's Ordeal

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

"Conservation, Nellie, that is going to be the rule and principle of this house until the war is over."

"Yes, Auntie," spoke Nellie Estes, submissively.

"Our duty to our country deserves every sacrifice in our power," continued the earnest-eyed patriot. "Wentless, meatless, and all the other set days of a wise and prudent government shall be strictly observed."

"I shall be only too glad to practice all self-denial required," declared Nellie.

"Further than that," resumed Miss Tabitha Todd, "we must economize for investment in Liberty bonds and war stamps. You must devote all your time to extra study, so you can surely pass examination for a schoolteacher next term. We must save on lights and fuel. We can go to bed earlier. We must do without company."

"Oh, Auntie," remonstrated Nellie, almost piteously.

"Yes, indeed," insisted Miss Todd. "Better spend your time in knitting for our heroes in camp, than entertaining young men who have no serious intentions. You understand me, Nellie?"

Only too well! Nellie thought of the pleasant evenings spent with a coterie of her young girl friends, and young men, too, and one in particular, Marvin Booth, who lived ten miles away.

Miss Todd announced her new formula publicly. She had been as a mother to Nellie, and the latter did not rebel at the severe restrictions which led to lonely, tiresome evenings. When Wednesday came Miss Todd went to the door as there came a ring. She had sent Nellie upstairs. She alone faced the shy-faced, but ardent Marvin Booth.

"My niece is assisting me in some necessary knitting," she announced, "and you must excuse her," and the young man walked away with a dejected look upon his face, and Nellie, watching his departure, cried as if her dear little heart would break.

Nimrod, the faithful canine protector of the family, came in for his share in the food conservation program. Every needless day Nimrod was given bread scraps, cold porridge and milk. He looked puzzled at the absence of his accustomed bone. The second needless day he seemed to do some thinking. Nellie, gloomy and dispirited as she was, had to laugh outright as she saw him save one bone, carry it to a snug fence corner and proceed to bury it, providing a reserve for the next needless day.

Nellie was made still more dejected as she learned that Marvin, who had enlisted, was to go to his cantonment in two weeks. She hoped he would write or make a special visit to the town, but he did not. Marvin had not forgotten her, however. The prim, merciless ways of Miss Todd had been exaggerated to him and he imagined that Nellie was like some luckless being imprisoned by a heartless ogre.

"I've got to see her or get some word to her or from her," vociferated this ardent young man. Then he wrote a brief, but glowing letter to Nellie. He dared not mail it, for Miss Todd might intercept it. One dark night Marvin skulked into the yard of the Todd home.

He got directly opposite a window of the sleeping room Nellie occupied. It was open, but the folded letter he held in his hand was too light to carry that distance. Groping about for something to attach it to, he supposed he found a piece of wood. It was really a bone that Miss Todd had thrown out for the dog that afternoon. Slipping an elastic band about the letter and the weight, Marvin flung it through the open window upstairs.

Miss Todd, shortly afterward coming upstairs to close the window against draughts and the night dew, guided only by the lamp rays from the corridor, struck the object with her foot, secured it and threw it outside.

"Some rubbish those heedless boys next door have thrown in," she scolded. "They broke a window in the hen house yesterday, and I shall really have to complain of them if they do not mend their ways."

Nellie had occasion to pass the fence corner where Nimrod had his cache the next day. The animal was burying a bone, and as Nellie noted this she observed the paper surrounding it.

"What is this, Nimrod," she challenged, and took up the object. She turned white and then red as she discovered that the pages unfolded comprised a letter from Marvin.

He told her of his love, he pleaded with her to see him at least once more before he went away. He told her how precious would be the knowledge, when on the battle front, that he had left a girl behind him who was to become his wife when victory had come and war had ceased. Nellie went straight into the house.

"Auntie," she said, "here is a letter I have received. It is from Marvin. He loves me and I love him. Shall I answer it?"

Miss Todd perused the missive. Her face began to soften. She thought of the only love she ever had, whom her coquetry had sent away, never to return, leaving her regret, instead of a golden sorrow. He, too, had been a soldier in the Spanish-American war.

She turned her face away, for it was stained with tears.

"Tell him to come, Nellie," she said simply.

SILK SKIRTS FOR THIS SPRING

The silk skirt of this spring usually indulges in a tunic which prides itself upon being uneven in length and gracefully draped. The skirt shown above has such a tunic and furthermore it conforms to dispose of most of its fullness at the front, after the manner of French frocks of today. This with its narrow, straight line underskirt and girle of the silk tied in front leave no question as to its good style.

BUYS THRIFT STAMP WHEN HE WANTS DRINK

New York.—"Give me a whiskey," a man demanded of Mrs. H. S. Collins, in charge of a war savings booth in the Flatiron building here.

Mrs. Collins handed him a War Savings stamp, for which he paid a quarter. "Mum, tastes good; gimme another," continued the genial stranger and paid another quarter.

"You see, it's this way," explained the man as he posted his stamps on an almost filled thrift card, "whenever I feel like having a drink I hustle and buy a stamp instead, and then I always buy a second one for having the will power to buy the first one instead of a drink."

MESSENGER WEARS SILK HAT

War Times Bring Many Quaint Characters into Service in Washington.

Washington.—War times and the unprecedented demand for aides for Uncle Sam have brought many quaint characters to Washington.

SIMPLE BUT INGENIOUS COAT

Every one of the new coatings for spring will look well made up in this simple but chic and ingenious style. At the waist and neck it has the raised lines that prove becoming and are feature in this season's styles. A belt of the cloth across the back confines the box plaits to the figure and three buttons prove sufficient as a finishing touch to the cuffs.

"Blue Sky"

By G. VAN DE VEER REYNOLDS

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

"I fear I do not understand you."

She was the daintiest, loveliest little lady possible and he a manly looking, clear-eyed young man, Gerald Thorne, lawyer for a year and surprised yet glad that a case had come to him unsolicited, and gladder still that his client was a radiant vision of youth and beauty.

"Pardon me," he spoke, "the phrase is so comprehensive." I casually used it. "Blue Sky," Miss Wayne, precisely expresses the fact that the two mining companies named in the memoranda you have submitted to me are stock juggling propositions of the most virulent type."

"Then the fifty thousand dollars invested in them is lost," questioned Miss Barbara Wayne anxiously.

"Absolutely and irretrievably."

A veil of sudden tearfulness crossed her clear blue eyes. She sighed and sat like one striving to recover from a shock.

"I hope you have not invested all that money in this wild-cat stock," he now said.

"Not myself, but my half-uncle and guardian has," replied Miss Wayne. "There is a man named Girard who has visited our home frequently for several months. I never liked him, but my uncle seemed to have some business with him and I did not interfere. Just today I saw something in a newspaper about the bankruptcy of refining companies. My uncle broke down, charging himself with having lost my fortune, and confessed how he had been hoodwinked. I see the futility of hoping to recover anything from the wreck. There is another matter of business I wish to refer to you," and the fair speaker removed from her handbag a roll of bills.

"There is fifty thousand dollars," she said, "which I wish to entrust to you for legitimate investment. Except sufficient to house my guardian, Mr. Wayne and myself in a modest way, that is all there is left of the fortune I inherited from my father two years ago."

"My dear young lady," exclaimed Thorne in amazement. "I cannot understand how you can unqualifiedly trust to me, a stranger."

"You are not a stranger," she gently corrected. "Among some papers of my father I found several where his attorney was named as Mr. Gregory Thorne. I naturally thought of placing my tangled affairs in his charge. From inquiries made I learned that he was dead, but that you had succeeded to his business. Surely I can trust the son of a man in whom my father had the utmost confidence."

"I thank you," bowed the young man, greatly moved. "I will act in your behalf as though you were an own sister," and then after an hour's consultation, those two parted, she relieved and trustful, he feeling that a sweet, entrancing presence had come into his life.

Barbara went home, full of resolve to make Robert Wayne feel that she could forgive the ruin he had caused. He was her only living relative, he was old and ill, her father had loved and trusted him. What little there had she would share with him to the last.

To her surprise as she reached home Barbara caught the echo of voices. The high-strained tones of her uncle well raised to an echoing pitch.

"You serpent! you scoundrel!" he shouted and Barbara discerned that his visitor was the swindler, Girard. "You dare, after robbing my niece of her fortune, to propose to marry her if she will give you the remnant left to work up some new nefarious scheme to rob confiding investors," and the old man ran to the fireplace, seized a heavy pair of tongs, started for his unwelcome guest, suddenly threw up his hands and fell prostrate in a fit.

Girard fled the house precipitately. Within the hour the afflicted girl knew that her uncle was in a critical condition, and that even if he recovered it would be months before he would be able to be about as formerly. In a half-dazed condition Mr. Wayne lay helpless week after week. Barbara found comfort and co-operation in the visits of young Thorne.

It was five months later when Robert Wayne felt his way slowly back to normal living. He lay on a couch in a room strange to him. The air was soft and balmy, the soothing odor of flowers filled the house. Barbara, by his side, quieted him as he burst forth in self-accusations of his part in wasting her fortune.

"That's all past, Uncle Robert," she said brightly. "Do you know where you are? In the sunny South, right on the ocean and this pretty bungalow is ours, and beyond it acres and acres that are daily growing in value. A friend invested my little all in this place, knowing of its prospective boom, and we will never want. The doctor said you needed blue sky." He groaned and winced. "Oh, real blue sky, and health and air, and forgetfulness of the past and hope for future. See."

Barbara drew up the shade. Through the open window space Robert Wayne viewed a panorama of fair vernal beauty.

"And we are going to make you happy," she continued.

"We," he questioned.

"Yes. Oh, so much has happened since—the old life. There he is now," as a welcome footstep sounded, "Uncle Robert—my husband, Gerald Thorne."

BEGIN HOT WATER DRINKING IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

If you wake up with a bad taste, bad breath and tongue is coated; if your head is dull or aching; if what you eat sours and forms gas and acid in stomach, or you are bilious, constipated, nervous, sallow and can't get feeling just right, begin inside bathing. Drink before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will flush the poisons and toxins from stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and cleanse, sweeten and purify the entire alimentary tract. Do your inside bathing immediately upon arising in the morning to wash out of the system all the previous day's poisonous waste, gases and sour bile before putting more food into the stomach.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became loaded with body impurities, get from your pharmacist a quarter pound of limestone phosphate which is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Men and women who are usually constipated, bilious, headachy or have any stomach disorder should begin this inside bathing before breakfast. They are assured they will become real cranks on the subject shortly.

ARRANGE NAVAL PLANS

High Officers of Allied Nations Confer at Paris.

American Warships Are Expected to Play An Important Part in Future Operations.

Washington, April 29.—Conclusions reached at the inter-Allied naval conference at Paris are expected to be followed by important operations by the Allied fleets.

A formal program in which definite and important parts are assigned to the American naval contingent abroad is an expectation of the naval authorities at Washington. This contingent now includes all types of craft, from submarine chasers and destroyers to dreadnoughts of the most powerful class.

Rear Admiral N. R. Twining, chief of staff to Vice Admiral Sims, is representing the United States in the Paris deliberations.

Invented Big Gun.

At one time Admiral Twining was chief of the bureau of naval ordnance here. It was he who drew the plans of the giant 16-inch rifle that is to be a prominent feature of all American dreadnoughts of the future.

There is an air of restfulness in naval battle betokening big things to come. A naval official of high rank declared that the recent exploits of the British in the Cattegat, at Zeebrugge and Ostend and in the Adriatic, may be regarded as the forerunner of comprehensive work for the extermination of the enemy U-boats. The 15th of July is fixed among officers at the navy department as the date when the submarine menace will have been practically obliterated.

ALL PLANS FOR FIGHT OFF

Willard-Fulton Bout Not To Be Held in Twin Cities

Minneapolis, April 29.—Made acquainted with the real situation in Minnesota, Colonel J. C. Miller, promoter of the Willard-Fulton fight, has abandoned all idea of having it in St. Paul, July 4, or anywhere else in the state. It is reported on good authority. Colonel Miller has gone east and is understood to be looking around for a new location.

The state boxing commission has set next Saturday as the date for a formal hearing, but it was thought likely that the Miller negotiations with Minnesota will be broken off formally before that time, making the hearing unnecessary.

REGIMENT WIPED OUT

French Unit Holds Out Eight Hours Against Foe.

Obedient To The Letter Command To Defend Position on Mount Kemmel "To The Death."

With the British Armies in France, April 29.—Ordered to defend Mount Kemmel "to the death," a French regiment stationed there obeyed the command to the letter.

Entirely surrounded by Germans the poilus held out for more than eight hours, slaughtering whole companies of the enemy as they swarmed up the steep slopes in the face of the French machine gun fire.

A veritable flood of gray clad troops finally swept over the summit, obliterating the defenders as "one's heel does an ant's nest." The old guard at Waterloo, this French regiment "died—it did not surrender."

Striking at Heights.

With eyes fastened on the summits of Monts Scherpenberg, Rouge, Noir, Kokereele and Des Cats, the German hosts are ceaselessly battering against the Franco-British lines drawn across this group of heights.

Beyond these hills to the sea one solitary mound sticks up from the Flemish lowlands—the highest in the lot. Upon its summit is the town of Cassel.

Hindenburg wants these hills. Eight divisions (96,000 men) were thrown against them the first day of the present assault and more are coming up.

Go Around Hills.

The Germans are using the same tactics they have employed since Liege—trying to turn the hills instead of taking them by storm. Having swung around Kemmel, across the plains to the north, they are trying to smash their way onward to Lacytte (one mile north,) hoping to turn Scherpenberg (a mile northwest of Kemmel).

Coincidentally they are attacking northward toward the bluff through which the Ypres-Comines canal passes a couple miles south of Ypres.

General Wood Urges Haste.

Denver, April 29.—"The war is in desperate straits," said Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood here in a Liberty Loan address to a large crowd at the municipal auditorium. Five million is a conservative number of those we must raise. Half or more will be sent abroad; half will be in training here to make up waste, which will be heavy."

FLANDERS DRIVE SUFFERS CHECK

Allies Standing Firm at All Points and Even Make Gains in Counter Attacks.

MAY EVACUATE YPRES

Teutons Unable to Take Complete Advantage of Their Tactical Successes On Account of Severe Losses.

London, April 29.—The battle for Ypres entered into a critical stage when the German army under General Sixt Von Arnim was flung into a concentric drive against the big pivot of Haig's left from five directions.

Hill 60, the last natural barrier blocking the German advance on the town from the southeast, has fallen, Berlin announced.

At the same time the village of Loere, six and a half miles to the southwest of Ypres, was taken by Arnim's left, according to the same German war office statement.

London, April 29.—The French and British have effectually checked Gen. Von Arnim's headlong rush in Flanders, though the situation at Ypres continues very critical.

The Germans have reached the southern outskirts of Voormezeele village, according to Berlin's official claim, and are thus only a scarce two miles directly south of Ypres.

But the Germans have missed their chance to follow up the capture of Kemmel height by a swift northward dash into the rear of Haig's Ypres forces. Though the Ypres salient in all probability will be gradually yielded to the foe, there will be no large scale victory in it for Von Arnim, which it might have been had his legions not been too badly cut up and exhausted and unable to reap the fruits of their tactical success.

Enemy Onslaught Halted.

The Allies have regained choice pieces of ground in counter attacks. Thus, the village of Loere at last accounts was again in their hands. Along the line of Dikchebusch-Dranoutre, which is now Ypres' right flank, the Franco-British troops fought a splendid delaying battle in which terrible losses were inflicted on the Teutons.

Before the Germans finally succeeded in biting themselves into Voormezeele's southern outskirts, the British beat them back again and again, and a neat bag of prisoners—several hundreds—is recorded by Haig in his report. In the same statement, Haig was able to announce:

"After many hours of fluctuating battle the enemy's advance was held at all points."

The report concedes the loss of a British post north of Freestherb, but reaffirms the failure of the Teutons to make any substantial headway.

Situation Below Ypres Obscure.
 The situation just south of Ypres is somewhat obscure. It is fully within the realm of possibility that the evacuation of the Ypres salient is under way, while the French and British are holding the foe southwest of the great strategic pivot which has lost its value to the Allies since the fall of Kemmel height.

Before Amiens the Allies retained the upper hand. No fewer than 900 prisoners were taken by them in 24 hours, chiefly on the front between Hangard-en-Santerre and Villers-Bretonneux. Their line was again advanced materially. A bitter struggle is on for Hangard wood.

ACCUSED OF SEDITION

Millionaire Railway President Is Under Arrest.

William Edenborn Is Being Held By Department of Justice Agents for Investigation.

New Orleans, April 29.—Charged with violation of the espionage act, William Edenborn, president of the Louisiana Railway and Navigation company, and a naturalized citizen of German birth, was arrested by department of justice agents at Shreveport, La.

The arrest followed a meeting here of the National Security league, Louisiana section, at which resolutions were adopted characterizing alleged utterances by Edenborn at an Americanization meeting of citizens of German descent last Friday night as "seditious treason against the United States and its Allies."

Taken Away Secretly.

Edenborn, who is 70 years old, and reputed to be many times a millionaire, was taken into custody as he stepped from a train of the road of which he is president. He was removed to a place the location of which the federal agents refused to divulge.

The resolution adopted by the Security league committee quoted Edenborn as having said at the Americanization meeting:

"There has been much talk of Germany coming over here and attacking the United States. We need have no fear that Germany will ever attack the United States."

Hits "Certain Prime Minister."

"It would take a maritime nation to do that because America is surrounded by water. America can look to other countries for any possible attacks in the future. Recently a certain prime minister stated: 'Our nation is mistress of the sea, has been mistress of the sea and always will be mistress of the sea.'"

Edenborn, founder of the American Steel and Wire company, now a part of the United States Steel corporation, has been referred to as "Father of the wire industry in America," having erected mills and produced wire in 1870, three years after he came to the United States from his birthplace, Westphalia, Prussia.

Americans at Raiders' Funeral.

Dover, Eng., April 29.—A large party of American almoners attended the funeral of the British seaman and marines killed in the Zeebrugge raid early last week. Business was virtually suspended during the services. The procession started from the market place, where the flag-draped coffins of those who had given their lives in the daring naval dash on the Belgian coast base were placed in motor lorries for the three mile procession through the city's streets to the cemetery.

Sugar Beet Pulp for Cattle.

The desert cattle ranchers of Arizona and New Mexico have learned that to raise cattle is one business and to fatten them is another. For this reason they ship their cattle to California, where sugar beet pulp is obtained in abundance. One factory is located near the fields where the beets are grown. The cattle are turned into this field after the beets are harvested. Under the fence is placed a trough which projects outside of the fence just enough to allow the beet pulp to be thrown into it from the cars. The cars run on tracks from the factory to the field and follow the fences around the corral. More space is thus obtained for the beet cattle to feed, and there is but little waste of fodder. In these war days the cattlemen are learning to conserve stock food, as the cattle themselves are conserved for our use.—Popular Science Monthly.

FARMERS HEAR CREAMERY MAN

Eighty in Attendance at Cooperative Creamery Meeting at Chamber of Commerce

HELD SATURDAY AFTERNOON

Supt. Mortenson, Experienced Butter-maker of State Creamery at Albert Lea, the Speaker

Eighty farmers interested in the Farmers Cooperative Creamery Association listened to an address Saturday afternoon by Supt. Mortenson of Albert Lea, buttermaker of the state creamery, on the work of conducting a creamery in a successful manner.

They were assembled at the Chamber of Commerce rooms. The question of raising capital stock was considered.

The Japanese Way

Japan has government ownership of telephones. All of the profits from operation go into the general fund, and parliament makes an annual appropriation for extensions much less than the earnings, forcing persons desiring service to wait from two to five years before they are reached. The result is that a great brokerage business is done in telephone numbers. In Tokio there are 61,000 telephones in use and 120,000 names on the waiting list.

When a man desires to release a telephone number he does not notify the government office. He goes to a broker and sells it to him. The broker keeps the rental paid up, which is all the government seems to be interested in, and if an important person desires to secure service he pays the broker four or five hundred dollars for the number.

If a man with a telephone number gets temporarily hard up he can put the number in pawn, because it has a certain market value. Of the 61,000 telephones in Tokio 13,000 are at present given as security for money borrowed. This is the only advantage that the system has yet developed.

It is expensive to become a telephone subscriber, because in addition to paying a big sum for the number one has to pay the government sixty-six yen, or $36.00 a year for service. Many men have developed a neat income from purchasing phone numbers and then renting them out at as high a rate as they can get. One man owns 180 telephone numbers, and has a large income from the surplus above the government rate, which he pays.

Private branch exchanges are unknown under Japanese government ownership. A large establishment must go out and buy telephone numbers on the market when it desires additional service. If he should merge the identity of those purchased numbers with his old ones he would lose his investment in numbers. A number is a number whether it carries one or a dozen wires. When a patron desires to call up an establishment he must start in on one and keep calling additional ones until he gets one that isn't busy.

GRAND DUKE IS SAID TO REIGN

Son of Former Russian Czar Becomes Emperor and Grand Duke Michael Regent.

MANY RUMORS AFLOAT

State Department and Russian Embassy at Washington Are Without Any Authentic Information on Alleged Revolution.

Stockholm, April 29.—Reports from Finland say the new Russian government will refuse to recognize the Bolshevik peace treaty with Germany and rumors persist that the monarchy is again in existence.

The rumors would be disregarded here were it not for the fact that a report from Vasa, Finland, last Thursday declared that the transportation of Russian civilian prisoners had had to be suspended "because of current disorders in Russia."

Russia Cut Off Three Weeks. Finland and Sweden had no telegraphic communication with Russia in more than three weeks.

Correspondents of Swedish newspapers in Finland telegraph persistent rumors in circulation there of important happenings in Russia.

The most definite rumors reiterate that the former Grand Duke Alexis, son of the former emperor, has been declared emperor with Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch as regent.

Washington 29.—No word has been received in official quarters here to throw light upon the report of a new revolution proclaimed at Petrograd with the purpose of restoring the monarchy and placing little Alexis Nikolaevitch, son of the former czar upon the throne.

Neither the state department nor the Russian embassy is in touch with Petrograd, however, and if the report were true the news probably would come from many sources before confirmation reached here in official dispatches.

New Light on Anarchism.

It was at our last meeting in Tiffin that the indomitable optimist threw new light on his anarchism.

"Tropotkin, Reclus and myself were sitting together in London once, discussing our theories. We were talking a great deal of satisfaction in the thought that we were anarchists, who recognized no rights of coercive government."

"But," he added with a smile, "I said to them: 'There is one government before which we gladly bow and whose petty oppressions we willingly endure. You forget our wives.'—Maynard Owen Williams, in Christian Herald."

TALKS TO LARGE AUDIENCE

Colonel Roosevelt Roundly Assails Conscientious Objectors.

New York, April 29.—No American has a right to a night's sleep unless during the day he has done something to aid in the war against Germany, declared Theodore Roosevelt in urging a large audience at the Brooklyn Academy of Music to invest in the third Liberty Loan.

"The man who does not think it was America's duty to fight for her own sake, in view of the infamous conduct of Germany towards us, stands on a level with a man who wouldn't think it necessary to fight in a private quarrel because his wife's face was slapped," asserted the former president, prefacing an attack on the conscientious objector.

"I would try to find out what he is conscientious about," said the colonel. "He may be conscientious about killing somebody else or he may be conscientious about keeping his own carcass safe from injury."

HAVE NO USE IN COMMERCE

Almost No Possibility That Submarine Boats Will Ever Be Employed as Cargo Carriers.

One point about submarines which is being settled for many years to come, if not forever, is that there is no place for them in the commerce of peace.

If they ever had a chance of profitable employment in carrying cargoes or passengers, that opportunity would be found now. Germany has a few ports open to her ships in neutral countries, if vessels in the service of German owners could get there, and in some of them freight might be found which is much needed in Germany. But no commercial submarines are ever reported to be visiting the harbors of Spain or Chile or Mexico or Colombia.

And now is the time when the greatest machine countries on the other side in the world war might be tempted to use submarines for practically complete seizure from other submarines if the economic obstacles were not too formidable. The fact that nothing is done with submarines in trade between countries whose coasts are menaced by the German U-boats is convincing evidence that the submarine has no commercial future.

It would be rash to predict that the exploit of the Deutschland will never be duplicated under the conditions of war. Circumstances may some time justify such use of submarines for a brief period. But business fleets of submarines are destined to remain an inventor's dream.

Do Something Better Than the Other Fellow---

and ADVERTISE

Advertising cannot accomplish the impossible any more than barren ground can yield rich crop.

But how advertising does make things hum when the product and proposition are right, the men and methods above board, when there's an honest purpose and earnest effort from bundle boy to general manager to serve efficiency, to deal honestly, to sell good goods, to price fairly.

Oil up the machinery of your business, imbue your organization with the spirit of true service, make your business worthy of the good will, the confidence, the patronage of the people.

In this fertile field then sow the seed of advertising and it will bring forth abundant crops in increased business and augmented prestige.

Your store news in the Dispatch will be read in practically every home in Brainerd and vicinity every evening.

FOE SURROUNDS FRENCH FORCE

Poilus Trapped on Summit of Mt. Kemmel When Germans Take Part of Hill.

TEUTONS DIVERT BLOWS

Attack Flanders Hills But Suffer Enormous Losses—Cast Out of Villers-Bretonneux and the Region Southeast.

London, April 27.—The French have attacked Kemmel hill, and a furious battle is raging, says a dispatch from Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters in France.

Abandonment by the Allies of Ypres and its salient appears inevitable as the result of the fall of Mount Kemmel.

The German army under General von Arnim is driving against Ypres from the southeast, south and southwest. By pushing northward between Kemmel and Lucre, on the Ypres-Bailleul road, the Germans are threatening the British army in the rear.

With the British Armies in Flanders, April 27.—Although they have been surrounded on the summit of Mount Kemmel, the French forces are still fighting. German storm troops force a wedge between the British and French flanks, then turn southward and pour down the valley to the west of Kemmel hills, cutting off the French.

Driving Towards Amiens.

With the French Armies in the Field, April 27.—The Germans are continuing the development of their attack against Amiens with increasing violence, aiming eventually at a separation of the Franco-British forces.

French Counter Attacking.

With the British Army in France, April 27.—The French are counterattacking at Mount Kemmel in an attempt to reclaim the position taken by the Germans. The previous fighting was of a desperate nature and the enemy gains were only made at a frightful cost.

Heavy Fighting in Progress.

Heavy fighting is still in progress along the ridge line of the Flanders front, where the peak of Mount Kemmel is the German objective.

This peak evidently is disputed.

ground but with the German threat against it more menacing, as it is conceded by the British official report that the enemy has obtained a footing on the hill.

Although faced by a superior force in the 10 mile sector between Bailleul and Hollebeke, the Anglo-French troops holding this line battled stubbornly, giving ground and only when compelled to by weight of numbers.

Hold on Ypres Endangered.

Definite possession of Kemmel hill by the Germans might mean that the British would have to abandon the Ypres salient, according to correspondents at the front.

The fighting on the Somme front has died down to artillery fire, following successful execution of the British coup which reclaimed the village of Villers-Bretonneux from the Germans. The British troops completed their operations there for the time being by cleaning out hostile posts which were holding out to the southeast of the village. This established the British once more well on the high ground in this sector.

NAVAL HEADS GATHER

Important Meeting of Marine Men From All Nations Fighting Germany is Held at Paris—Shipping Situation is Improving.

Allied Naval Heads Meet.

London, April 27.—An important meeting was held at Paris by the Inter-Allied naval committee, according to Reuter's Paris correspondent.

U. S. Shipping Improves.

Washington, April 27.—Great improvement in the shipping situation was reported by the war council of the War department in its weekly conference with the House military affairs committee.

Both in number of ships and in the speed made for the round trip, it was said, new marks were being set up. As against the old time of from six to eight weeks for a trip to go to and from Europe, avoiding submarines, a recent record has been made of 16 days.

Weather Proves Factor.

Weather, as well as an increasing knowledge of how U-boats operate has been a factor, it was said.

The net result has been, it was reported, that troops and supplies are going across at a rate unthought of a few weeks ago.

Only a brief study was made of the present stage of the German offensive the exact strategy of which has not yet fully developed. But war council members said that the Allies in the respite between Tontun blows, had improved their positions and strength.

WEIR HANDLES AIR FORCES

Named to British Position Vacated by Lord Rothmere.

London, April 27.—Sir William Weir has been appointed minister of the air forces in succession to Lord Rothmere, brother of Lord Northcliffe, who resigned. Official announcement of Sir William's appointment has been made.

The Standard says it understands that Lord Northcliffe, chairman of the London headquarters of the British mission to the United States, and director of propaganda in enemy countries, tendered his resignation because of ill health, but at the request of the premier and the cabinet he consented to continue his duties until a successor can be found.

Baron Rhondia, the Daily Mail understands, has resigned the office of British food controller, which he has held for the past 10 months. He has been absent from his post for some weeks, owing to illness. John R. Clynes, parliamentary secretary of the food ministry, has been in charge temporarily.

David Alfred Thomas, first Baron Rhondia, has been known as the Welch coal king. He came to the United States in 1915 to organize war munition supplies and was on the Lusitania when that vessel was torpedoed.

Wrecked Steamer Refloated.

Halifax, N. S., April 27.—The Norwegian steamer Imo, which was driven ashore on the east side of the harbor after a collision here with the munitions steamer Mont Blanc on December 6, has been floated. The force of the explosion of the Mont Blanc's cargo, which resulted in the loss of 1,800 lives, left the Imo a blackened, crumpled heap, and salvage company agents said she never could be raised. The captain and most of the crew were killed.

UNITED STATES WILL RUSH MEN

"Last Reserves" to Crush Prussian Military Machine Are to Be Quickly Transported.

TONNAGE IS AVAILABLE

Considerations of Commerce and Trade Will Be Laid Aside for Transporting Troops and Munitions to the Battle Front.

Washington, April 29.—The United States is to furnish the "last reserves" that will give the final decision against the Prussian military machine. This important announcement regarding the war was made here.

"Men, men, more men!" on the western front in the present great crisis of the war is the cry from all quarters that has been ringing in the ears of the American people.

"Ships, ships, more ships!" for the transportation and maintenance of American troops abroad is the echo of that appeal that has stirred the United States Shipping board from day to day.

Two Million Men to France.

The decision has now been reached. The supreme effort is to be made to get troops abroad. Considerations of commerce and trade have been indefinitely put aside. The business of winning the war is the only business that will be recognized from this time on.

Two million men and more are going to France as soon as they can be loaded on transports and shipped away.

It is not a matter for a shipbuilding program or of negotiations for tonnage. The necessary tonnage is now under the control of the United States, and to the last ton it will be devoted to the transportation of troops and war supplies until the "last reserves" of American troops have been placed in fighting position on French soil.

Congress will be asked to authorize an army of 3,000,000 men available for service abroad and a reserve army at home, both for home protection and to make up the wastage at the front.

Ready to Vote to Five Million.

Congress is ready to vote an army of five million men. It is waiting the estimates of the war department. The war department has been waiting upon the shipping board. The board promised at an important conference early in the week, to supply all the shipping that would be required to take every available man to the front in France.

Quartermaster General George W. Goethals, in supreme command of the transport of troops and supplies, later furnished the Shipping Board with an estimate based upon the number of men the United States was prepared to send to the front. It caused the officials of the board to pause, but now the members have made their answer. They will meet the shipping requirements of the estimate of the number of troops supplied by Gen. Goethals. It is the last words. It is reported that the estimate is in excess of 2,000,000 men; in fact, that it is close to 2,500,000 men.

New Plan is Advanced.

In its announcement the Shipping Board puts forward an entirely new plan. It is estimated that two and one-half deadweight tons of shipping will supply a soldier's needs in France for a year. Departmental estimates have been as high as six or eight tons of shipping for each soldier.

The Shipping Board has tonnage enough afloat under its absolute direction and control to transport the necessary number of troops to France to make up a force of 2,000,000 American fighters without waiting upon new shipping, and to sustain them after they are landed in France.
